

OKUTA IYEBIYE

Olabintan Omolola Oluwatosin

Okuta Iyebiye
You are precious stones
Made and carved out for one purpose
To serve the pleasure of the master
To form an habitation for him

Okuta Iyebiye
Yes, you are stones
Appearing to be dormant
Knowing not fully well the potentials that lie in you
You neglect the beckoning of the master

Okuta Iyebiye
Surely, you are stones
Nevertheless, living stones
He who wants to use you has given your life
But why still act dead?

Okuta Iyebiye
A living stone is what you are Perhaps the implications of that you do not realise
You move, respire, eat, detect, GROW and REPRODUCE.
You form an habitation too

Okuta Iyebiye
Surely, you live
The master dwells in you,
Surely, you will grow Look not at yourself of what you encompass now
For if you feed, you will grow.

Okuta Iyebiye
A standard has been set up for you
A pattern has been made after which you must be made.
He is the Chief Cornerstone
He is the Rock

Okuta Iyebiye
As much as your growth is important
Much more important is why you are living
Okuta Iyebiye,
You are living to accommodate He that lives
You move to carry he that lives in you around
You grow so as to expand him

Okuta Iyebiye
Most importantly,
You are a stone and not a building
You cannot live alone on your own
The one that lives won't stay in stone
He only dwells in an habitation
When you stand alone, you accommodate nothing
When all living stones assemble, until then, they can't form A SPIRITUAL HOUSE that houses the one that lives.

Okuta Iyebiye;
A precious stone
Okuta Iye;
A lively stone Remember, a stone alone on its own is useless,
But a house made of lively stone lives to contain the one that lives!
